

CAPSULE SUMMARY (CT - 1172):

Located in a modern subdivision, the Mutual Estates Tobacco Barn is an interesting remnant of earlier use of the property. This early 20th century tobacco barn is typical of ones built as local farmers shifted to a more mechanized mode of production. Large, double doors provide easy entry for tractors pulling wagons full of speared tobacco plants. The vertical siding, metal roof and poured concrete piers are all standard in barns of this period.

7. DESCRIPTION (CT - 1172):

Mutual Estates Barn is located on the west side of the main road into the Mutual Estates subdivision approximately one-quarter mile from its intersection with Broomes Island Road. The barn is the fifth structure on the west side of the road. Investigation of this barn was limited to its exterior.

The Mutual Estates barn measures 24 x 24 feet on a north-south axis with a double aisle plan. Two double doors are located on both the north and south gables. The barn is covered with vertical siding which is painted red, and is supported on poured concrete piers. Standing seam metal sheets cover the roof which is supported on common rafters at four foot intervals and a flat false plate. The moderately pitched roof is believed to be supported by three collars.

An electric box on the barn's northwest corner suggests a possible interior stripping room, although it may be related to the present, non-agricultural use of the building.

8. SIGNIFICANCE (CT - 1172):

The Mutual Estates barn is of modern construction post-dating 1900. It appears to have been associated with a large, late 19th to early 20th century farmhouse, but is now associated with a modern rambler. The barn is significant because of its role in the production of Calvert County's most important agricultural product-tobacco. Directed documentary research may result in the determination of a more specific date of construction, as well as placement of this structure into a more specific historic context.
